

Transitioning from Operational Manager to Strategic Leader

Uncover essential skills, insights and qualities to navigate from daily management to long-term strategic vision

This exclusive seminar outlines tactics for individuals aiming to enhance their strategic skills, whether they are motivating a small group or a large company.

Moving from being a manager who focuses on dayto-day operations to becoming a leader who thinks strategically requires a change in mindset and approach. To become a strategic leader, it is important to start thinking beyond day-to-day tasks and focus on the bigger picture. This involves understanding the organization's vision, mission and long-term goals.

Equip operational managers with the skills and knowledge needed to make the leap to strategic leadership. Acquire a profound comprehension of the qualities of a successful leader in today's ever-changing corporate landscape through a combination of interactive conversations. hands-on activities and real-life instances.

After attending this seminar, you will possess the necessary understanding of moral guidance, a firm grasp of your individual leadership approach, emotional intelligence, business expertise and the capacity to establish and accomplish long-term objectives. Furthermore, you will possess a firm grasp of risk mitigation, empowering you to make knowledgeable choices while maneuvering through possible obstacles in an ever-evolving corporate environment.

What You'll Learn

- Explore the difference between an Operational Manager and Strategic Leader.
- Define leadership in the context of modern organizations.
- Build knowledge of the role of ethics and integrity in leadership.
- Build trust and credibility as a leader.
- Assess personal leadership style.
- Develop a deep understanding of the business landscape.
- Translate business knowledge into strategic decisions.
- Create empowered teams.
- · Identify organizational challenges and opportunities.
- Understand the dynamics of change in organizations. EXPRESS CODE

©2010-2024 Pryor Learning

